

CHANGES ARE DUE IN DOWNTOWN BANKS

Interlocking Directorate Cases
Found Outside of Capital's
"Financial District."

Changes incident to the Clayton anti-trust law governing interlocking bank directorates will not be confined alone to the zone prescribed for what is generally termed the "financial district" of Washington, by the Federal reserve board.

Several vacancies also will be occasioned on boards of downtown banking institutions.

A list of the changes in the directorates of downtown banks was published yesterday in The Times.

The National Bank of Washington, lying without the zone, will lose two directors. Milton E. Allen already has tendered his resignation in order that he may remain on the board of the American Security and Trust Company, of which organization he is a vice president.

William F. Mattingly, who is serving on the board of the Bank of Washington, and the Second National Bank, will remain with the Second National of which institution he is general counsel.

This decision will leave the board of the Second National intact as none of the other directors has conflicts under the law.

Two Changes at Lincoln.

The Lincoln National Bank will probably have two changes. William F. Gude and Richard J. Earnshaw are members of its board and are also serving several other banking institutions.

Neither has yet notified the officials of the Lincoln as to which of the boards he will remain with.

The Bank of Commerce and Savings still has several cases of conflict which have not been disposed of, and which probably will be appealed to the Federal Reserve Board.

Acted on Three Cases.

The Reserve Board acted on three cases from that bank. Alexander Wolf, on appeal to the reserve board, was permitted to retain his positions on both the board of the Second National and the Bank of Commerce and Savings.

Floyd E. Davis and Albert S. Gately, officers of the Lincoln National Bank, were permitted to serve as directors of the Bank of Commerce and Savings.

In view of this fact, the officers of the Bank of Commerce and Savings feel that the remaining cases will be decided in their favor.

The Columbia National Bank and the Washington Loan and Trust Company are both free from cases of conflict.
